Mazda rx 8 buggy parts

At the heart of the RX-8 since 2003 has been its 1.3-litre RENESIS dual-rotor rotary engine. With a standard 6-speed manual transmission, the engine has a power output of 232 hp. The optional 6-speed pampered slot machine, available on sport and grand touring models, has a power output of 212 horsepower. The front suspension is an aluminum double-duty bone and the rear is equipped with a multi-line adjustment with stabilizer rods all around. Steering assistance comes from an electric motor rather than a power steering pump for fuel efficiency and better feedback. Rear passengers enter a small rear compartment using the rear folding half-doors. The B-pillar deficiency makes this possible without compromising safety. A series of locking pins hold the door together and also connects them directly to the roof and floor. The standard is six airbags, as well as anti-stop disc brakes with tyre pressure monitoring and electronic brake distribution systems. Even the brake pedal is designed to break off in an enforced crash to avoid injury to the legs and feet. The entry level of the RX-8 Sport can be equipped with manual or automatic transmission, front and rear stabilizers and a differential with limited slip for manual models. Electric mirrors, doors and windows are standard, as are 18-inch alloy wheels, pollen filter air conditioning, 6-speaker sound system, cruise control and leather steering wheel and gear knob. Grand Touring adds HID xenon reflectors, fog lights, HomeLink, rain wipers and stability control with traction control. Inside, the stereo gets upgraded to the Bose system, the driver's seat has a memory function and the leather seats are heated. A DVD-based navigation system is optional. Grand Touring gets standard moonroof and satellite radio. The performance-enhanced R3 has sport-tuned suspension with Bilstein shock absorbers and front suspension crossmembers filled with urethane foam for a more comfortable ride. The wheels are slightly larger at 19 inches and the rear has a wing-style spoiler rather than a lip spoiler. The Recaro seats in R3 are covered with leather and fabric trim, and the Bose sound system is standard. The factory navigation system is not available for R3.
